

Name: _____

Section: _____

Date: _____

Subject Verb Identification Practice

1. When John played the piano, he made no errors; consequently, his parents were proud of him.
2. After the girl skipped rope, she went in for lunch, and then she took a nap.
3. While the waitress had cleaned off the table, she had not wiped off the salt shaker, nor had she swept under the booth.
4. Because the custodian was shampooing the carpet, we could not schedule the room; consequently, we requested a new location.
5. Although there were two stuffed animals on the bed, the child wanted her stuffed monkey, and her parents got it for her.
6. Even though there had been a table in the corner, now Jim did not want one there; he wanted one in the opposite corner.
7. While George W. Bush is President of the United States, he is pursuing terrorism, and his effort is supported by the U. S. Congress.
8. Because Hilary Clinton seems well qualified for a government position, she may run successfully for office, and eventually she may be the first female U.S. President.
9. While Julie is athletic, she remains quite feminine; this combination makes her an attractive woman.
10. Because Juan was quite muscular, he successfully lifted the weight, and he won the 2002 Oregon State Championship competition in high school.